The writer does not know the exact date of the arrival of the Halls in Maryland, but it is known that they were here long before the close of the seventeenth century.

Richard Hall, dying in 1788, left a large landed estate, and his third son, Benjamin Hall, inherited land on the Patuxent river. This Benjamin Hall married, not later than 1695, Mary Brooke, daughter of Thos. and Eleanor Hatton Brooke and granddaughter of Robert and Mary Baker Brooke.

Benjamin and Mary (Brooke) Hall seem to have had but two children—Francis, the son and heir, and Ellinor. The following inscription taken from the tomb of Ellinor Hall, which lies flat on the lawn at Pleasant Hill and upon which though dark and worn the lettering is still plainly seen, tells its own sad little story: "Here lies the body of Ellinor Hall, daughter to Benjamin and Mary Hall, of Charles county, Maryland, who departed this life on Friday, ye 17 day of July, Ano., 1702. Aged, 5 years and 9 months."

Thus was Francis Hall left the sole inheritor of the wealth and affection of his parents. The present house at Pleasant Hill was built during his childhood, and the walls of brick had reached the height of the doorway when he was sent to St. Omer's College, in France, to receive his education. On the day of his departure the builders wrought in bricks of a darker color in the front wall of the house his initials and the date of his going. These were obliterated when the mansion passed into the hands of a stranger. The great front doorway and arched hall within are typically Colonial; the rooms are large and well lighted, with huge fireplaces and plenty of closets; the stairway fine and easy of ascent.

Francis Hall, or "Grandpa Frank Hall," has been described by a great-granddaughter, whose mother well remembered him, as a person of marked individuality from youth to old age. Educated at St. Omer's, in France, he may be supposed to have been a man of intellect and culture. He lived through the Revolution and was an ardent patriot, joining at the beginning of the struggle an association whose members pledged themselves neither to purchase nor use any goods brought from England. Though a man of great wealth, Francis Hall wore the same coat for years until it was covered with patches, rather than wear English-made clothing.

One day some elegant French officers called at Pleasant Hill to see him. In a shabbily dressed old man wearing a patched coat they were surprised to find the master, but by the fluency with which he spoke their own language they quickly recognized the gentleman and scholar.

Francis Hall died in September, 1785.

His will was dated August 22, 1782. He married Dorothy Lowe, daughter of Col. Henry and Susannah Maria Bennett (Darnell) Lowe, and by her had six children. Dorothy Lowe Hall was a very interesting lady and lived to extreme old age. It is told that once at the age of 90 years she "cracked" the head of a servant for daring to address a great-granddaughter by her Christian name. This wonderful old lady died in February, 1803, aged 99 years, having survived her husband 18 years. She was very young when married, and but 15 years older than her eldest child, Benjamin, who died in March, 1803, at a very old age, having survived his mother but a few months. Francis and Dorothy Lowe Hall's six children were: (1) Benjamin Hall, who married Eleanor Murdock; (2) Richard Bennett Hall, who married Margaret Magruder; (3) Francis Hall, who married his first cousin, Martha Neale, and resided at Bollingly, Queen Anne's county, Md.; (4) Susannah Hall, who married Mr. Darnall; (5) Eleanor Hall, who married Mr. Digges; (6) Henrietta Maria Hall, who married John Waring.

Benjamin Hall, son of Francis and Dorothy Lowe Hall, inherited Pleasant Hill. He married Eleanor Murdock, daughter of William and Nancy Addison Murdock. Their five children were: (1) William Hall, who married Martha Hall, of Anne Arundel county, and left two daughters; (2) Henry Lowe Hall, the younger son, inherited Pleasant Hill and lived and died there unmarried, leaving the estate to Benjamin Clarke, the son of his sister Nancy; (3) Nancy Hall, who married Thomas Clarke, and had children: (a) Benjamin Hall; (b) Thomas Hall, who married Susan Adams, granddaughter of President Adams; (c) Maria Hall; (d) Martha Hall; (e) Charles Clarke Hall; (4) Eleanor Hall, who married, first, Dr. David Clarke, brother of Thomas Clarke, who married Nancy Hall, and had two daughters: (a) Marianne Clarke and (b) Mary Ann or "Polly" Clarke.

Eleanor (Hall) Clarke married, second, John Smith Magruder and had by this marriage six sons and one daughter, namely, Mortimer and Francis Magruder, who died young, and Nathaniel Magruder, Roderick Magruder, Henry Magruder, Alaric Magruder and Margaret Eleanor Magruder, who lived to maturity. Margaret Eleanor Magruder married Dr. Jesse Ewell, of Prince William county, Virginia.

Eleanor Hall Clarke Magruder was born January 23, 1766, and died August 7, 1852. She lies buried by the side of her second husband, John Smith Magruder, at Dunblane, Prince George's county Md.

(5) Katharine, or "Kitty," Hall married William Bowle and left many descendants.

To return to the children of Eleanor Hall by her first marriage with Dr. David Clarke, Marianne Clarke, the elder daughter, was considered a beauty. Her father named her for the wife of Dr. Craik, who had been Miss Marianne Ewell, of Virginia, and with whose husband he had studied medicine. Marianne Clarke married at the age of 16 her mother's cousin, Addison Murdock, and by him she had one son, William Murdock, of Georgetown, D. C. Left a widow at a very early age, she married, second, before she was 21 years of age, Charles French, Esq., and had by this marriage one daughter, Virginia French, who, like her mother, was renowned for her beauty and who married Maynadler Mason, son of General Mason, who was a descendant of George Mason, of Gunston. Maynadler and Virginia French Mason had many children.

Mary Ann (or Polly) Clarke died unmarried. She lived in Georgetown and was well known as a woman of strong and decided character.

Richard Bennett Hall, the second son of Francis and Dorothy Lowe Hall, married Margaret Magruder and settled at Collington Meadows, near Pleasant Hill. Their descendants are still living and are represented by Mr. Frank Magruder Hall, of Prince George's county. In the first issue of the Maryland Journal, August 20, 1773, is found a quaint advertisement for a runaway negro by Richard Bennett Hall.

Francis Hall, the younger son of Francis and Dorothy (Lowe) Hall, married his first cousin, Martha Neale, daughter of Edward and Mary Lowe Neale, and they settled at Bollingly, Queen Anne's county. After Martha (Neale) Hall's death her husband married, second, Anne Hawkins, of Charles county, and they had a daughter, who married William Bowle, of Prince George's county, and left descendants. Anne Hawkins Hall was a brilliant, dashing woman and much admired socially. A devotee of the chase, she often followed the hounds through Queen Anne's and Talbot counties. She wore a green habit and presented a conspicuous figure seated upon her spirited steed. She was made the heroine of a book written by one of her contemporaries and founded upon the events of those times.

The children of Francis and Martha (Neale) Hall were: Francis Hall, Edward Hall, Benjamin Hall, Mary Hall, Theresa Hall, Martha Hall, Eleanor Hall, Henrietta Hall, Maria Hall, Richard Hall and Susannah Hall. The last two died unmarried. Martha (Neale) Hall died May 31, 1789, aged 51 years and 5 months, and lies buried at Bollingly, Queen Anne's county, Md. Her father, Edward Neale, born 1700 and died December 28, 1760, lies buried at Bollingly also and very near his daughter. There is a handsome oil painting of Martha (Neale) Hall (through which the British ran a sword) still in the possession of one of her descendants. This picture shows her to have been very handsome with her hair combed high and powdered, as was then the style.
